Course Rules: In order to have a productive semester, the following rules will be used in this course. If you do not want to abide by these rules, I suggest that you drop this course as soon as possible:

1. Turn off all cell phones at the commencement of class. If you use a cell phone in class, I will ask you to turn it off. If you refuse, I will end the class and report the matter to the Dean of Arts. Cell phone usage in class is a disrespectful and disruptive act.
2. Laptops are not permitted for taking notes. These devices are disruptive to the classroom environment.
3. There are no extra assignments or tests. If you perform below your expectations, it is your responsibility to see me so you can improve on your performance in the next test.
4. Please keep track of your grades. I will not e-mail test results. Come to class and collect your tests.
5. Academic Integrity: The Academic Integrity Policy may be found at: http://www.sites.stfx.ca/registrars_office/academic_integrity. Students do not need to be caught USING a device like a smart phone during a test or exam to be in violation of the policy. Simply having the unauthorized device on their person during the test or exam is a violation of the policy. In other words, put your cell phone away before the commencement of a test.
6. E-mail Policy: Please restrict your e-mails to necessary communications. These include extended absences from class (more than one week) and family emergencies. I refuse to use e-mail to cover lectures from missed classes. My office hours or the phone are be used to cover materials pertaining to the course. You can also see me after class.

Course Outline

This course introduces students to urban sociology. The central objective is to cover the major themes and empirical research issues in urban sociology in the 20th and 21st century. Urban sociology has deep connections with urban geography. Throughout the course, emphasis is given to the connections between the social and the spatial. Moreover, urban social research also deals with the interplay among economic, cultural, historical and political factors. Thus, this course has an interdisciplinary focus. In fact, most of the readings are by human geographers. However, as you read these materials, you will see similarities with sociological analysis. Throughout the course, we will cover case studies from the Global South and the Global North.

The course is divided into four sections. Section One is an overview of rise of the ‘urban’ as a social science phenomenon. We begin with an assessment of the ‘city’ in a comparative and historical context. Next, we cover several frameworks of urban analysis: the Chicago School, political economy, feminist and postcolonial perspectives. Section Two is an overview of urban development, policy and planning in the Global South and the Global North. The objective here is to assess how ‘master plans’ and globalization impact upon day-to-day lives in urban areas. Section Three covers urban forms and livelihoods. One theme in this section includes the impact of public policies on housing for urban dwellers. A key issue is the role of political elites and property owners in setting the context for housing location and prices in urban areas. A second theme is the unequal social and spatial context based upon gender, ethnic and racial background, (dis)ability and sexuality in urban areas. Section Four assesses the environmental context of cities in the industrial and post-industrial period. Topics here include: plants, animals and urban life (including urban food security), health, water governance, waste and global climate change

Evaluation

- 1) Test 1: Thursday, October 4, 2018. Two essay questions worth 50 marks each. This test is worth 25 per cent of your final grade.
- 2) Test 2: Monday, November 5, 2018. Two essay questions worth 50 marks each. This test is worth 25 per cent of your final grade.
- 3) Essay: Due in class (not under my door after class), Monday, November 19, 2018. I only accept hard copy; e-mail submissions are not permitted. The guidelines for your paper are in Moodle. These will be discussed in class on Thursday, September 13, 2018. This is worth 15 per cent of your final grade.
- 4) Class Participation: 10 per cent of your final grade. This grade consists of both class attendance and participation. Students will be asked to address questions in class on Thursday that are raised in class on Monday. The use of a cellphone in class will count as non-attendance.
- 5) Test 3: Final Examination. Two essay questions worth 50 marks each. This examination is worth 25 per cent of your final grade.
